Aussie kids planting trees to build their schools back green

In 2011 the Green Lane Diary will reach over 30,000 students – That's double from last year thanks to your support!

This year Network Ten is partnering with Green Cross to feature schools doing great Green Lane Diary projects on the Toasted TV show.

Hundreds of schools right across Australia are provided with a high quality, fun educational journey through energy, water, waste and land care issues supported by an award winning multi-media website that parents love to use at home.

All kinds of practical activities have been inspired by this program from organic gardens to waste patrols and green tuckshops.

You can watch Green Cross inspire thousands of kids through this show every Saturday morning in term 3 - 2011.

With your support Green Cross will continue to grow the Diary program to boost a new generation of young environmentalists.

Over 1.1 billion people do not have access to drinkable water, leaving roughly one sixth of the world's population at risk of contracting fatal diseases and illnesses. With your support, Green Cross Australia is building its first Smart Water for Green Schools project in the east coast of Ghana.

GHANA: Smart Water for Green Schools

Green Cross Australia is providing Ghana's first tailored environmental education program with the goal of supporting sustainable and peaceful development to reverse the present trends of water-related illnesses and death.

We are providing water tanks to deliver clean drinking water at the Dawu Methodist Primary and Junior High School attended by 589 students – with over 2,300 people living in the nearby village.

Through the construction and implementation of rainwater harvesting systems and ecological latrines, Green Cross International's Smart Water for Green Schools initiative will provide a reliable supply of water hygiene and sanitation facilities as well as environmental education to school children, teachers and parents living in areas lacking clean drinking water.
